Twenty Years of Serving the Sacred

by Julia Occhiogrosso

William* stands behind us as we pass out bread on the morning soup line. He is painting the sky with his colorful vocabulary. I turn to my ten year old son and stumble to explain the angry words. "I think he is talking to the voices in his head," I whisper. Nick nods as if he understands. It is the first time he has heard his friend William speak like this. Usually he greets Nick with a friendly high five; "What's up cool Nick?" and offers him a trinket from the collection decorating his bicycle.

This morning William sounds like a different person. He moves back and forth between angry outbursts to some imaginary form and friendly conversation with the soup line servers. There are many people both on the streets and not on the streets who's pain and suffering shows itself in acts of anger. The mask of aggression is worn to hide the sorrow and pain. For us at the Catholic Worker, the challenge and commitment is to cultivate relationships that unmask and call forth the goodness and sacredness of even the most troubled.

As we begin our twentieth year in Las Vegas, we are grateful to so many of our supporters and volunteers who have enabled us to meet this challenge. Your faithful commitment to our efforts of feeding the hungry, sheltering the homeless and comforting the afflicted, has born much fruit. In addition to the thousands of lives that have received some form of material comfort, we have witnessed the promise of love, mercy and forgiveness. We have seen the wonder and goodness in those that society has cast off and rejected. Indeed, we have been gifted with the opportunity to experience healing by what they have awakened in us.

William sits next to me at the table in the dining room of the Catholic Worker House. He smiles with his child-like grin as he enjoys the home-style cooking of our hospitality day lunch meal. I treasure the moment and am filled with deep joy as the truth of his sacredness shines like the light of the world.

As we celebrate our twentieth anniversary, we request your continued generosity. With your support we will continue to be faithful to the principles of Gospel love in action. Understanding and empathy will replace fear and violence. Indeed, Christ will be born again in our midst.

Blessings,

POPE OPPOSES WAR IN IRAQ

"There were not sufficient reasons to unleash a war in Iraq. To say nothing of the fact that, given the new weapons that make possible destructions that go beyond the combatant groups, today we should be asking ourselves if it is still licit to admit the very existence of a 'just war'".

-Cardinal Ratzinger, now Pope Benedict XVI, May 2, 2003.
